

Top officials at the U.S. Department of Homeland Mundanity expressed grave alarm today over the waves of concentrated friskiness emanating from an undisclosed location in Maryland. The friskiness phenomenon was first recorded early Wednesday, but has been reaching critical levels over the last 24 hours. "We're accustomed to spikes in friskiness around this time of year, what with school being out and all," said Barry Ennui, Undersecretary of Languor, "but this is beyond all previously recorded levels. I've got a whole room of professionals staring at a bank of overloaded tediometers. It's the sort of thing that gives one pause."

Ennui continued "Americans need to understand how serious widespread friskiness can be: you think that friskiness is no big deal, but in a short while it can lead to gallivanting, or even horseplay. If the current outbreak remains unchecked, we could be looking at a 6.3 level rumpus, if not higher."

The prospect of such shenanigans has shaken the current administration to its core. Insiders predict high level firings in the (continued on page 2)

Citizens are reminded that if they suspect that they or a loved one may be becoming frisky, the best thing to do is to avoid all contact and to call the D.H.M., who will be able to dispatch agents to the site of carousal in mere minutes. Undersecretary Ennui said “ Let us handle it; under no circumstances should you grab the frisky person, or kiss them, or tie them up, or tickle them, or flog them, or have prolonged ear-achingly satisfying sex with them over and over again. Otherwise, you may end up frisky yourself.”

PLACIDO STILL NO-SHOW, AS RUMORS FLY

Speculation continues to swirl around the missing spirit animal, Placido Flamingo. All around camp, disconsolate individuals have been trying to make do with surrogates, inflatable or otherwise. Meanwhile, the original, admittedly never one for promptness, has still not turned up for camp this year. Around the dining hall , scuttlebut was thick and furious, like Carmen Electra's hair. Some hint that the pink wonder is "close by". Others claim that he is being held captive in Oink. A quick investigation revealed this to be false, Still, many campers remain optimistic that they will soon catch a glimps of the majestic pink bird, unless he's off balling some Ivory-Billed Woodpecker some where.
